About Robert Gardner

I am a father of two young girls. I am passionate about Financial Wellbeing in a World Worth Living In and I believe financial education is the building block for financial wellbeing. Every child should know how money works and how to make money work for them, which is why I teach the basic principles of money - how to Earn it, Keep it, Grow it!

I co-founded RedStart, a financial education charity which aims to plant the seed for the financial well-being of young people. I wrote a children's book 'Save Your Acorns', followed by a card game 'Silly Monkeys' based on the book. I gave a TEDx Talk on the importance of teaching our children about money and I chair the Children's Financial Education Policy Council in the UK.

I am also the Investment Director on the executive board for St. James's Place Wealth Management, where I am responsible for protecting and growing the wealth of 750,000 Clients. I co-founded Redington, a leading investment and pensions consultancy, which is on a mission to help make 100 million people financially secure. I also co-founded Mallowstreet, an online community with the goal of delivering a better retirement for everyone, and I am a Member of the World Economic Forum Retirement Council.
